Napoleon Just Before Waterloo.

The Emperor sent for me (after his return from Elba) and kept me with him about a quarter of an hour. As this was my last interview with Napoleon, I will give the particulars of it:

"Well," he said, as soon as he saw me, "well, have you made good selections? Can I rely on the men you have appointed?"

"I have done my best," I answered, "but I can not answer for them to your Majesty. The time allowed me was altogether insufficient. I found new friends who knew the country no better than myself. I avoided as far as possible making choice of men of extreme views, and I excluded all those who were not seriously such; but I can answer for nothing. Besides, until either political treaties or victories have definitely pronounced for us, we can not reckon on any real success. The return of the Empress to Paris would do more at this moment than all the efforts of the Commissioners to the Departments."

"You are right; I don't yet altogether despair. I have sent to Vienna; I have endeavored to treat with Talleyrand; he will listen to nothing; he is sold to England. But," interrupting himself, "was the Duc de Bourbon still in La Vendee when you got there?"

"I do not know," I replied, "and I made no inquiries. If he was there, it was better to give him an opportunity of getting away than to try to detain him."

Then, after a moment's silence, he resumed:

"What is the state of public feeling in those departments?"

"It is my duty to tell your Majesty the truth," I replied, "and I will not attempt to disguise it. With the exception of some parts of La Vendee, where it was entirely against the Bourbons, and almost revolutionary, in other places, and especially among the higher classes, it is, if not hostile, at least cold and indifferent. As for the lower classes, they seem actuated rather by a return to republican maxims than by any other sentiment; and if they attach themselves to the name of your Majesty, it is because they take it as a guarantee of the liberties which they claim, and which you have promised to restore. But I must not conceal that nearly everywhere women are your declared enemies, and in France they are adversaries not to be despised."

"Oh, I know that," he exclaimed. "I am told of it on all sides. I never admitted women into cabinet secrets; I never suffered them to meddle with the Government; and they are now avenging themselves."

The conversation, during which, as his custom was, he had never ceased walking up and down, then dropped, and after a silence of a few minutes, I was dismissed.

I left the audience chamber with an unsatisfactory impression. The Emperor was no longer what I had seen him formerly. He was moody. The confidence that of old had manifested itself in his speech, the tone of command, the lofty ideas that directed his words and gestures, had disappeared. He seemed already to feel the hand of adversity that was soon to weigh so heavily upon him; he had already ceased to reckon on his destiny.

A NEWS item says the Duke of Albo lost at cards at one sitting $1,000,000. We have sat down at cards—"old maid" or "authors," or anything that way—more than fifty times, but we never lost $1,000,000. The Duke must have had a hole in his trousers pocket.—The Judge.

President Arthur's Father.

Rev. William Arthur was a man of ability and originality, who formed his opinions without much reference to the views of others, and was most persistent and vigorous in asserting and maintaining them. A recalcitrant deacon or trustee in a church over which he was pastor had no life of peace; the best thing was to maintain an armed neutrality while Mr. Arthur was at the head of affairs. Yet he was a man of kindly and tender feelings, who could be swayed by them, but never by opposition. Quick in repartee and ready in resources, he was a formidable opponent in debate or in strategy, and few men cared to try conclusions with him. Coming from Ireland, he brought with him the mental peculiarities of his nation, as well as a rich, strong Irish accent, which gave a peculiar raciness and flavor to his public efforts and to his private conversation; and few brought in contact with him but have recollections of his shrewd and brusque remarks. He was passionate and impulsive, often making enemies by his sharp utterances, and always fought to win.

He had the reputation as well as the appearance of being dictatorial and of carrying out his purposes with small regard to the plans of other people. Notwithstanding his undoubted ability, he never met with the success to which he felt that he was entitled, and this somewhat embittered his manner and feelings. Yet the man was most thoroughly honest and truthful; no consideration of policy or of care for his own comfort and welfare was permitted to influence his conduct; and if he did what was right in his own eyes it was because it appeared right to him; he could neither be cajoled, bribed nor persuaded to go out of his predetermined path.—Boston Transcript.

How to Learn the Art of Kissing.

Kissing may be said to be like swimming. The kisser must abandon himself wholly to the business—close his eyes, as it were, and trust to the natural buoyancy of his body to recover himself after the ecstatic plunge. A girl takes to kissing as kittens take to sport, with a natural aptitude for the quintessence of its delight. Under the tuition of any girl the most bashful youth soon learns the operation of the lips, and, once learned, the art is never lost. No rules can be given for the pussing or the placing of the lips. The suggestion that it might be practiced before the mirror is not worth considering, as there is an intellectual process in the artistic development of a kiss which cannot be stimulated or invoked save under the eye of the owner of the lips that invite and under the tender spell that transforms those same lips into the one object in all the world that the lover yearns to taste. The sign of a right sort of a kiss is unmistakable. There is a mounting color in the cheek and a softer glitter in the eye, that tells the story with youth or maid. There is a story that the mustache plays a leading part in the perfect kiss, but this must be a matter of option, as Byron—who was so fond of kisses, longed to have all the kissable lips in the world made into one mouth that he might kiss it—had no mustache. Julius Caesar, too, who dropped into kissing as a relaxation, had no beard. Indeed, the chronicles of kissing would probably show that the beardless gallants, whose kissing made the happiness of the Queens of old, were none the less effective with lips that knew no beard.

WE SAW something while passing up Warburton avenue the other evening which reminded us of the story once told of two lovers which is sweetly applicable. He said: "Who's tweet?" and she said: "Babe of us; let's 'tiss!"—Yonkers Gazette.

DAILY EVENING BULLETIN.

WEDNESDAY EVE., MARCH 8, 1882.

Bankrupt Law.

The Judiciary committee of the Senate has reported a bill to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy. The measure provides that whenever any person, who has not been guilty of fraud, shall become involved in debts and liabilities, beyond the means of payment, amounting to five hundred dollars and upwards, he may apply by petition in equity to the United States District Court, setting forth the cause of insolvency, and giving a schedule of liabilities and assets, and may surrender his estate for the benefit of creditors, except such as may be exempt from execution, and if good cause appear, the courts shall adjudge him bankrupt and appoint a receiver, and serve notice to all interested persons and distribute the estate according to the rules of equity, and if there was no fraud the petitioner shall be discharged as a bankrupt. The bill also provides that when a person runs away, or absents, or conceals himself, or makes fraudulent transfer of property, or otherwise attempts to defraud creditors, the latter may file a petition for bankrupt proceedings against him. Insolvency shall exist only when the debtor's liabilities exceed the value of his property. Power to extend time or stay proceedings are conferred upon the court.

Any conveyance, transfer or payments made in view of bankruptcy may be set aside, if found contrary to the just rights of other creditors, but money obtained and used in good faith, though unsuccessfully, to avoid an impending bankruptcy, or to save a threatened sacrifice of property, or for sickness or other like necessity may be preferred in payment or in security by the Court. If it appears that any creditor has oppressively sought to force a debtor into bankruptcy, or to obtain any fraudulent advantages over other creditors, the Court may deny such creditor participation in the estate. The District Courts shall be considered always open for the consideration of bankrupt business, and all regular bankrupt business shall have precedence. The costs of bankruptcy will be much less than under the former law, and the final discharge will be had in a shorter period. Such a law is necessary and ought to pass Congress.

W.M. KISER, a prominent citizen of Bourbon county, died Saturday.

It is believed at Washington that the effort to reduce the tax on whisky and tobacco will fail.

The Lexington, (Ky.) Daily Transcript thus kindly notices us:

We are in receipt of a copy of the BULLETIN of Maysville, a neat little four-column daily, full of news and spice.

THE pension committee of the Senate has reported favorably the House bill to pension Mrs. Garfield, with an amendment to include Mrs. Polk and Mrs. Tyler. The amounts specified are $5,000 a year from Sept. 19, 1881.

WHO of the young readers of the BULLETIN will guess the following puzzle? What is that which has three feet but no legs, is all body but no limbs, has no toes on the feet, no head, moves a great deal but never uses its feet for that purpose, has one foot at each end and one in the center of the body? This is a queer creature in some respects, and is very popular among the ladies and some gentlemen. It never walks out but goes with one foot where the head might be, dragging the other foot behind. These feet have nails but no toes, no heels and no bones in the feet.

Dr. Frazier's Root Bitters.

Frazier's Root Bitters are not a dram-shop whisky beverage, but are strictly medicinal in every sense. They act strongly upon the liver and kidneys, keep the bowels open and regular, make the weak strong, heal the lungs, build up the nerves and cleanse the blood and system of every impurity.

For dizziness, rush of blood to the head tending to apoplexy, dyspepsia, fever and ague, dropsy, pimples and blotches, scrofulous humors and sores, tetter, ring worm, white swelling, erysipelas, sore eyes and for young men suffering from weakness or debility caused from imprudence, and to females in delicate health, Frazier's Root Bitters are especially recommended.

Dr. Frazier: I have used two bottles of your Root Bitters for dyspepsia, dizziness, weakness and kidney disease, and they did me more good than the doctors and all the medicine I ever used. From the first dose I took I began to mend, and I am now in perfect health, and feel as well as I ever did. I consider your medicine one of the greatest blessings.

PILES! PILES! PILES!

A Sure Cure Found at Last—No One Need Suffer!

A sure cure for blind, bleeding, itching and ulcerated piles has been discovered by Dr. William, (an Indian remedy,) called Dr. Williams' Indian Ointment. A single box has cured the worst chronic cases of twenty-five or thirty years standing. No one need suffer five minutes after applying this wonderful soothng medicine. Lotions instruments and electuaries do more harm than good. Williams' Ointment absorbs the tumors, allays the intense Itching, (particularly at night after getting warm in bed,) acts as a poultice, gives instant and painless relief, and is prepared only for piles, itching of the private parts, and nothing else.

Read what the Hon. J. M. Coffinberry, of Cleveland, says about Dr. William's Pile Ointment: I have used scores of pile cures, and it affords me pleasure to say that I have never found anything which gave me such immediate and permanent relief as Dr. Williams' Indian Ointment.

DAILY EVENING BULLETIN.

WEDNESDAY EVE., MARCH 8, 1882.

Miss Julia Hunt, as Florinel,
A perfect little beauty,
All of us should go to see,
As is our bounden duty,
To Fleming's name, her native home
Her genius lustre lends,
And all of us, as it were
Are neighbors and her friends.

Mrs. Jules B. Kampe, and Miss Phebe Pierce, of Covington, will leave Cincinnati, Saturday, by the steamer Charles Morgan, for New Orleans.

Mr. H. Lange has leased the store occupied by Mr. R. Albert and will take possession of the same about the middle of this month.

The business of Maysville is good this week. Most of the merchants have received their spring stocks and are disposing of it at a lively rate.

The funeral of Mrs. M. A. Haucke took place from the Presbyterian Church, this afternoon at two o'clock, after services by the Rev. S. B. Alderson.

The spring announcements of many of our Maysville merchants will appear in the DAILY BULLETIN of Monday next. It will be a paper valuable for reference in making spring purchases.

A BILL to authorize the City of Maysville to subscribe and pay for stock in the Columbus and Maysville railway has passed the House. The full text of the bill was recently published in this paper.

In the house of Representatives, Saturday, a bill presented by Mr. Kehoe for the benefit of the Pleasant Ridge turnpike road, in Mason county, was referred to the committee on Internal Improvements.

Death at Frankfort.

FRANKFORT, Ky., March 8, 1882.—J. H. Wilkinson, member of the State Senate from Trigg county, died last night.

The supper and rag ball party, given by the ladies of East Maysville and neighborhood for the benefit of the M. E. Church, South, in Chester, will take place at Amazon Hall, on Friday and Saturday evenings. Don't fail to be present.

There was no matinee at the opera house this afternoon, owing to the failure of the company to make connection with the boats at Portsmouth last night. The company will arrive by the Bonanza this afternoon, and will appear at the opera house as announced this evening.

Miss Hunt at Portsmouth.

Special to the DAILY BULLETIN.

PORTSMOUTH, O., March 8, 1882.—Miss Julia A. Hunt and her company made a superb hit here last night in the new play of Florinel.

JOHN WILHELM,
Proprietor Opera House.

Sales of Land.

The following changes in the ownership of land have been recorded at the office of the Clerk of the County Court since our last report:

Maria Bryant to John H. Wilson, one lot in Chester, consideration, $110.
Wm. T. Calvert to Chas. G. Calvert and others ninety-five acres of land consideration, on Stone Lick Creek, consideration, $1,200.

SPEAKING of McIntyre and Heath's Mammoth Southern Minstrels, announced to appear at Washington Opera House tomorrow evening, the Atlanta, (Ga.) Constitution, says:

The performance was a worthy one, and deserving of a good recommendation. The plays were new throughout, and several features were entirely novel to the stage and the field of minstrelsy. The jokes were not the stale fossilized productions of a dozen seasons ago, but were indeed reviving in their freshness, and raised peal after peal of laughter. The clog dancing was good beyond all denial, and Messrs. McIntyre & Heath need fear no competition in this field.

PERSONALS.

Points About People Here and Elsewhere.

Mr. John Eitel, of Higginport, Ohio, is visiting relatives in this city.

Miss Kate Conway, of Lewisburg, Ky., is visiting friends and relatives at Cincinnati.

Miss Tillie Ranson, after a pleasant visit to friends in Danville, and Covington, has returned home.

Mr. Charles Calvert, left for his home at Waco, Texas, to-day. He took with him sixteen thoroughbred harness and saddle horses, an unusually fine lot.

Horrid Murder.

MT. VERNON, KY., March 8, 1882.—Mary Sigman while sitting in a room with her five children and her mother, was shot and killed by an unknown man. The murderer afterward returned and sent a bullet through the body of the mother. James Bishop, a rough character from Tennessee, was arrested charged with the crime. Two men were killed some time ago at the Sigman house, and this last murder it is believed, was committed for revenge.

Street Parade.

A street parade by McIntyre & Heath's Mammoth Southern Minstrel troupe will take place at eleven o'clock to-morrow morning, the day of their appearance at Washington Opera House. There will be twelve brass instruments in the procession, and a drum corps of six snare drums. It will be well worth seeing, and everybody should look out for it.

Postmaster Appointed.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 8, 1882.—The President has appointed T. M. Cardwell, postmaster, at Harrodsburg, Ky. He is a stalwart, a Grant man and was chairman of the county convention, which selected Grant delegates to the Chicago convention.

Shooting at Mt. Sterling

MT. STERLING, KY., March 8, 1882.—John Cronin and Richard O'Conner had a difficulty which resulted in Cronin shooting and wounding O'Conner, it is believed fatally.

Small-Pox.

MORGAN, CENTER, O., March 8, 1882.—Small-pox has appeared here in a most alarming form. There are more than forty cases and four deaths have already occurred.

Over the Hills and Down the Valleys of the State of Lewis.

Editor Bulletin: Merging from three months winter office work and confinement, the first of March we started out on the summer exercises over the hills and down the valleys! What was our surprise? Were the spring lambs gamboling over the green, the highlands broken up for seed; the birds mating; the fish splashing on the riffles; young calves around the front yard; hens clucking, chicks pecking, frogs croaking, fruits budding, ducks laying and the old geese giving evidence that they would not die goslingless.

All this was taken in on the 1st day of March, 1882, proving a very unusual advanced spring. We tarried over night at the hospitable mansion of Mr. Wm. L. Shridler joining the Esculapia property, and was not only entertained at a table covered with many tempting viands, such as none but Mrs. S. knows how to spread. After tea we enjoyed a literary feast given by readings from many distinguished writers with much effect. Mr. and Mrs. Shridler are fond of dramatic verse and render the most difficult translations with the ease and grace of a professional. The 3rd of March found us engaged with Esquire Wm. Jones, one of the proprietors of Esculapia Springs. Our mission was to locate the Lewis county Sunday school at the springs for 1882.

The proposition offered by the officers of the Sunday School Board is a most liberal one for the springs. Mr. John Stacy, the junior partner is anxious the two thousand scholars and teachers should be entertained there, but Bro. Jones is obstinate. For the good-reputation and loving name of Esculapia, this meeting there would immortalize the establishment.

Negotiations are pending however for future actions.

Crossing flats and creek bottoms after an open wet winter, is a dangerous undertaking for man and beast. After severe trials, we reached the tobacco establishment of Cox & Lykins, located in Burtonville. This enterprising firm had on hand fifteen thousand dollars worth of leaf tobacco. This does not include shipments of tobacco to come in.

J. M. Hawley's good wife took pity on man and horse and gave us a lunch each. She reads the BULLETIN.

Tollesboro was next in our list of calls: Bob Gillespie and Sam Agnew, the boss merchants of Lewis county paid us special favors for which the BULLETIN will report.

Engagements required our presence distant from the many friends in and around Tollesboro; so we concluded in reporting the singular fact that in freely mixing with the people, partizan sentiments are ignored, but its worth a year's subscription and an Unabridged Webster thrown in to hear the various expressions regarding newspapers.

The Lewis democracy and the Mason republicans have a white elephant each.

The Lewis democracy is firm and immovable in the original faith. Buckeye editors for either party are not acceptable.

"Some men are born great,

Others are born in Ohio."

Kentucky imports her wants and pays expenses.

Volunteer immigration is not what her people seek.

Buckeye editors to dictate and lead the old party veterans in the Ohio idea is an anomaly the future must solve for KENTUCKY.

BART.

LAWRENCE CREEK.

Warm spring days are making things look cheerful once more.

Farmers are through striping tobacco; some are repairing fences, plowing and doing other spring work. Anything to break the monotony of the long wet spell.

A great many people appear to be on the move from the number of loaded wagons daily seen here.

Mr. Wells and Mr. McDonough each lost a horse from the pink-eye.

James Chamberlain is putting up a new two-story residence here. Messrs. Proctor & Marsh are doing the work.

Mrs. Hill advertises her farm and household good for sale on the 10th inst. She wants to go to Ripley, O.

Miss Emma Straubough decided last week not only to be Wise young but Wise for life. We hope they may not only be wise but happy as well.

Our school closes this month and Miss Hala Scotton will then open up a select school of twelve weeks here.

Miss Sallie, daughter of J. B. Chandler has been on the sick list and confined to the house ever since the death of her sister. We hope she may recover, so her parents may enjoy the love and society of one grown up and loved.

One of Mr. Slattery's sons met with a painful accident in getting his wrist badly bruised while hauling wood a few days ago.

The late rains have done much damage to the pike by filling up drains and overflowing; it has also caused a great many land slides in the hillside lands.

Patrick McDonough, Jr., and sister, of Manchester, Ohio, are visiting their uncle here this week.

Notice of Dissolution.

THE firm of C. W. & T. TUDOR has this day been dissolved by mutual consent, C. W. Tudor retiring therefrom. Thomas Tudor will continue the Tin and Stove business and collect all debts owing and pay all liabilities of said firm.

C. W. TUDOR,
T. TUDOR.

THOMAS TUDOR,

Guests.

Mr. Emerson alludes, somewhere, to the flutter in every well-regulated household, when a stranger approaches. Now, if the household is not well regulated, the flutter is apt to be a very serious matter. We know that the children, at least, are very glad to see "company," for, though they may rebel at the thought of clean faces and clean dresses, and good behavior, they are apt to look forward to a "good time" and an unlimited dessert.

Sometimes older people, too, enjoy having visitors. Longfellow tells us, in Kavanaugh, that his hero would have liked company every day in the year, but it may be that his heroine (if a comfortable matron may be called by so romantic a title) would not.

The truth is, that "guests," when one sits in the shadow of a dreadful presentiment, till Bridget appears with hard-boiled eggs and overdone beefsteak, to make one soliloquize: "Oh, my prophetic soul," etc., sometimes give us trouble.

It is true that over-refined good breeding may cause them to smile over the excellence of the cook's failures, but there are many establishments where household affairs do not always admit of a visitor. Perhaps this Turk, with his eternal pipe, and the Arab, in his very portable tent, may be always ready to "welcome the coming"—but more civilized nations eagerly "speed the parting guest."

It would hardly be possible, in this connection, to forego mentioning that the most common of guests, have been lately forbidden by law to cross our thresholds. "Much might be said on both sides," in regard to tramps. We hear dreadful stories of their behavior, and the word that describes them usually calls up a fancy-painted picture, touched with lurid colors. We see a fierce, sullen, robber-like personage, who seems to have escaped from the mountains of Italy, or at least the plantations of the Old South, armed with the traditional bowie-knife. Still he is sometimes a mild-mannered young man, willing to work for a very plain breakfast.

It will not do to dismiss the subject without a few words in regard to the treatment of guests.

A few of the points which distinguish the "perfect hostess" are, perhaps, a certain facility of putting each guest at his ease, conveying the impression that the welcome she gives is a personal, if not an especial one, her pleasant manner, and her charming serenity. Her tact is such that she is ready for any emergency, and she has the rare gift of saying the right thing at the right time, and to the right person.

But even if one can not be a "perfect hostess," one may, at least, show the truest politeness to guests, by cordially offering the best one has, and suggesting no possibility of feeling mortified that one has nothing more desirable to give.

Eider-Down Ducks.

The beautiful eider-down ducks which abound in the cold latitude of Norway are a source of great revenue, and are sole property of the inhabitants. They are protected by the laws of Norway, so that no stray sportsman is allowed to shoot them. I learned the mode of procuring the down: When the duck is about to lay, she plucks down from her own breast, the male plucks it from his, and they spread a thick lining of it all over the nest. When the nest is completed the owner removes the down; the patient duck fills it a second and third time, when it is removed; but the fourth time it is allowed to remain. Thus the women and girls find enough to employ themselves in tending to these thousands of nests, while the men and boys make and mend their nets and get fish for oil and curing.

The average newspaper writer has advanced well in his profession when he can write a verse of poetry, and have it set up by the printer as poetry, without going into the composing room and telling the foreman what it is.—Lampton.
